Banks Peninsula NEW ZEALAND

Banks Peninsula was formed following violent eruptions by three volcanoes. The craters nurse the harbours of Akaroa and Lyttelton; smaller bays indent the rest of the coastline. First European sighting by Captain Cook in 1770, Banks Peninsula was named for Sir Joseph Banks, the naturalist. The Peninsula was inhabited by Maori of the Ngai Tahu tribe, whose numbers were severely depleted in 1831 when Te Rauparaha and his warriors attacked the fortified pa on Onawe Peninsula. In 1838 Jean Langlois, captain of the French whaling ship Cachalot, negotiated with a local Maori chief to buy Banks Peninsula. On his return to France he formed the Nanto-Bordelaise Company which organised for 57 emigrants to leave on the Comte de Paris, accompanied by the warship L'Aube, captained by Charles Lavaud, for the voyage to New Zealand. When Lavaud arrived at the Bay of Islands he was told of the terms of the Treaty of Waitangi and consequent British sovereignty over New Zealand. H.M.S. Britomart was immediately sent to raise the British flag at Akaroa. The Nanto-Bordelaise Company sold its assets to the New Zealand Company in 1849, the French settlers having chosen to remain at Akaroa. They were joined by a larger group of British colonists in 1850.

Open daily from 8am for a French style breakfast and coffee or French inspired deli foods to eat in or takeout.
